SBI PO Exam 2017 results to be declared soon

Although the Bank is yet to give an official word, there are speculations that the results of the 2017 SBI Probationary Officers (PO) Mains Exam may be declared in the first week of June. As all the students were keeping their finger crossed, the State Bank of India (SBI), in a surprising move, postponed the result. The results were expected to be out on June 19 (Monday). The official Notification on its website read: The result of Main Examination held on 4th June 2017 for recruitment of Probationary Officers in State Bank of India, which was tentatively scheduled to be declared on 19.06.2017, is under process and will be declared at a later date. Last year the results for the Exam, which was held on July 31 were declared on August 19. There are 2403 vacancies for the post of Probationary Officers as announced by the Bank for which it conducted the Examination. Eligible candidates after clearing prelims exams appeared for the Main exam. The candidates seeking to join the prestigious SBI as Probationary Officers will have to register online for the recruitment process to be undertaken by the Bank after officially declaring the results.
